Location

1. The main group of buildings housing the State Secretariat for National Defense and the General Staff of the Yugoslav Army is located in Belgrade in a quadrangular block bordered by the following streets: Kneza Milosa, Masarykova, 1 May (formerly called General Zhdanov Street), and Nemanjina. The main entrance into the building containing the offices of General Ivan Gosnjak, State Secretary for Defense, and General Peko Dapcevic, Chief of General Staff, is located in Kneza Milosa Street.
2. The offices of General Gosnjak and General Dapcevic are located on the ground floor (which is a little higher than ground floors usually are) of the main building and can be reached through two entrances; the main entrance from Kneza Milosa Street, and a side entrance through a small courtyard from Kneza Milosa Street. A lieutenant CQ is in charge of the main entrance, and a sergeant CQ, of the side entrance. Nobody is allowed to enter the area without a special pass and in case of other visitors the CQ checks with Bjeletic (fnu), Gosnjak's secretary, who in turn checks with Vekoslav Kolb, Gosnjak's assistant, to see if the visitor can be admitted. The barber shop and W.C. serve only the offices in this area, and there is a brick wall in the hall closing the area on one side, with the CQ on the other side.

Ivan Gosnjak

3. Colonel General Ivan Gosnjak is the State Secretary for National Defense.
